

ECU Maritime Studies students record the stern of the “Pappy’s Lane Wreck”
(Photo: Calvin Mires/PMS)

This unidentified ferrous-hulled (probably steel), oyster-shell encrusted shipwreck first appears on NOAA and Coast Guard nautical charts in 1969 (above).

Local lore suggests that it was used to haul gravel to Rodanthe in the 1960s, and eventually washed ashore in a storm.

Recorded by:
Nathan Richards, Calvin Mires, Stephanie Gandulla, Daniel Bera, Saxon Bisbee, Joshua Marano, Jeff O’Neill, William Schilling, & Mark Keusenkothen

Drawing by:
Nathan Richards

“Pappy’s Lane Wreck” (PAS0001)

Plan: 31 May 2010

Chicamocomico Channel, Pamlico Sound

Rodanthe (Soundside), NC

(Lat. 35.60101°N Long. 75.47342°W)

Thanks to:
Monitor National Marine Sanctuary (NOAA)
North Carolina Underwater Archaeology Branch

